DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Restriction is required under 35 U.S.C. 121 and 372.

This application contains the following inventions or groups of inventions which are not so linked as to form a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1.

In accordance with 37 CFR 1.499, applicant is required, in reply to this action, to elect a single invention to which the claims must be restricted.

Group I, claim(s) 17-28, 31, 32, drawn to an isolated lactic acid bacterium comprising at least one gene involved in respiratory metabolism or involved in activating respiratory metabolism and a method of culturing said bacteria

Group II, claim(s) 29 and 30, drawn to methods for preparing a fermented product.

2. The inventions listed as Groups I and II do not relate to a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1 because, under PCT Rule 13.2, they lack the same or corresponding special technical features for the following reasons: the lactic acid bacteria and methods of culturing lack the same special technical feature with the method of preparing a fermented product. The claimed method of Group II uses a lactic acid starter culture and recovers a fermented product whereas Group I is drawn to a bacterium and a method of culturing said bacterium and producing a desired protein from said culture. Lopez et al. And Knauf et al (see PCT 210 search report) teach the invention of Group I and, therefore, it is not novel.

3. This application contains claims directed to more than one species of the generic invention. These species are deemed to lack unity of invention because they are not so linked as to form a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1.

The species are as follows:

Applicant must elect a single bacterium by electing the modification which the bacterium carries, e.g., where in the gene which is modified encodes protein of the heme biosynthesis pathway, or where in the gene encodes enzymes of the cytochromes biosynthesis pathway, the ccpA gene, etc.. The claims as written contain numerous different species.

Applicant is required, in reply to this action, to elect a single species to which the claims shall be restricted if no generic claim is finally held to be allowable. The reply must also identify the claims readable on the elected species, including any claims subsequently added. An argument that a claim is allowable or that all claims are generic is considered non-responsive unless accompanied by an election.

Upon the allowance of a generic claim, applicant will be entitled to consideration of claims to additional species which are written in dependent form or otherwise include all the limitations of an allowed generic claim as provided by 37 CFR 1.141. If claims are added after the election, applicant must indicate which are readable upon the elected species. MPEP § 809.02(a).

The following claim(s) are generic: none.

4. The species listed above do not relate to a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1 because, under PCT Rule 13.2, the species lack the same or corresponding special technical features for the following reasons: the species each contain a different special technical feature, e.g., the modification these bacterium carry can be of completely different genes. This allows for completely different bacterium because they carry completely different modified genes.

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art as shown by their different classification and their recognized divergent subject matter and because the literature search required for the Groups is not coextensive, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.
